How is Need-Based Financial Aid Determined?

The FAFSA and PROFILE analyses consider all sources of taxed and untaxed income as well as necessary family expenditures such as taxes, standard cost of living, and extraordinary medical expenses.

Other important variables include family size and the number of children enrolled in post-secondary education. The student's income and assets are also evaluated.

Financial aid awards typically remain consistent from year to year. However, a decrease in the number of siblings in undergraduate study or increases in income or assets may cause a decrease in need-based financial aid eligibility.

Academic Merit Scholarships

The selection process for these scholarships is competitive with awards going to top-ranking applicants based upon grade point average, class rank (if available), and SAT or ACT scores.

A separate application is not required; decisions on merit scholarship recipients are made as part of the admissions process under Early Decision and Regular Decision. For more information, contact the admissions office at 800-431-0803.

- Abraham Lincoln Scholarships: $26,000 annually
- Presidential Scholarships: $22,000 annually
- David Wills Scholarships: $20,000 annually
- 1832 Founders Scholarships: $10,000 annually

For students also receiving need-based aid, merit scholarships are not awarded on top of grant dollars but are awarded in conjunction with grant funds.

Sunderman Conservatory Scholarships

The Sunderman Conservatory of Music combines Gettysburg's superb music tradition with one of the nation's leading liberal arts and sciences colleges. Music scholarships are valued at $10,000 annually (audition required). For more information, visit gettysburg.edu/Sunderman.

Along with financial aid administrators, students and families can work together to determine the most effective way to use their resources as well as understand the grants, scholarships, loans and jobs which may be available. Having conversations early in the college search process about expectations of how students can contribute to their undergraduate education is one way to include students in this important decision.
